A ROUND UP ON THE MONTH!

Miscarriage of Justice

■ Killers of Jamie Bulger to be released thanks to the EU!

The killers of little James Bulger may be released shortly, each having served just eight years of a life sentence. Little Jamie was led away from a shopping centre in Liverpool and tortured to death. The mother of James Bulger, Denise Fergus, said she was considering legal action to try to halt the release of her son's killers after reports that one of them had tried to strangle a fellow inmate in a secure unit! Now, after a cosy living in a secure unit, they are to be released with new identities unknown to anyone. Their true nature and evil past will remain hidden - even to unsuspecting future girlfriends! This is another example of the insanity of the European Union and its charter of "Human Rights."

Racist Remark

■ Greg Dyke says BBC is "hideously white"!

Greg Dyke, the Blair-appointed Director General of the absurdly named British Broadcasting Corporation has described the BBC as "hideously white"! Greg Dyke, a typical politically correct self-hating specimen, recently told BBC managers that their end of year bonuses will depend largely on how many black people they recruit, which means that his managers now have a strong incentive to recruit and promote staff according to the colour of their skin, rather than their abilities or their proven performance. Imagine the outcry from the politically correct mafia if the head of, for instance, Channel 4, described the gallery of heavy-weight boxers in the last twenty years as "hideously black"! In true "anti-racist" fashion, the liberal-left have turned a blind eye to his racist remarks.

Health

■ NHS hires African nurses infected with HIV!

An excellent example of the "benefits of diversity" hit home when it was announced that 10 nurses brought in from Africa to work in the hospitals of the NHS are HIV positive! In the 1980s, it was suggested that all immigrants be screened for the virus which leads to full blown Aids, but it was considered too costly, and when it was suggested that because the vast majority of victims were from Africa, SO only Africans need be tested, the idea was rejected because it was "racist". It would seem that thanks to the twisted mentality of the ethnophiliacs, innocent NHS patients are being put at risk!

Latest crime figures

■ The latest crime figures confirm a descent into anarchy!

The latest crime figures released by the Home Office have shown an increase in muggings nationwide by a whopping 21 per cent. A criminal minority of black people accounted for 28 per cent of arrests for robberies across England and Wales, making up a massive 57 per cent of those arrested in London. Police morale appears to be at a low ebb with the disclosure that police recruitment has risen by 74 per cent, some 3, 271 officers, but only for 2,884 to leave the service during the same period!

Ethnic police recruitment appeared to be going to plan when the Met proudly boasted of an increase in 218 ethnic police recruits only to admit later that most of these new 'ethnic' recruits are in fact people of Irish stock! Sir John Stevens, the Metropolitan Police Commissioner, talking about the acute shortage of police officers said: "A big rise in shootings and murder involving drug gangs and a security alert over fears of further Irish republican attacks by dissident Irish republicans had forced the Met to take officers off the street..." The big rise in 'youth gangs', whose only way to obtain status was through acts of criminality, were partly to blame for the increase in street crime in London, said Sir John Stevens. The latest figures confirm what nationalists have been saying all along, that Britain is descending into anarchy and chaos. Only the British National Party can rescue our country from the criminal!

Labour degeneracy

■ Labour plans to dish out the pill to children!

Labour ministers have now given the go ahead for schools to legally prescribe the new 'morning-after-pill' to young girls who may have had unprotected sex! Disgracefully, girls as young as eleven years old will be able to obtain the drug with or without their parents knowledge or consent! A spokesman for the NHS said: "Whoever prescribes the pill in Schools will be trained to ask the right questions and make their own decisions as to whether the young adult (sic) should receive it." With the recent scrapping of Section 28, allowing pro-homosexual propaganda into our schools, one wonders if the Authorities will soon be sanctioning the free supply of 'extra-strength' condoms to underage boys who happen to be engaging in gay sex as well? And no doubt 'gay sex' taught in the school class room! Maybe the education authorities can invite the infamous Peter Tatchell to assembly to talk about his experiences!

Sleaze and corruption

■ Mandelson caught with his pants down - again!

The folly of Tony Blair in bringing his very close friend Peter Mandelson back into the Cabinet after his £370,000 home "loan" disgrace is now clear. Labour's Fairy Prince of Darkness has been caught out again, 'forgetting' details of his links with the Hinduja brothers, whose applications for the British passports they needed to dodge corruption trials in India were speeded up after they bunged £1 million to Mandy's Dome. Blair and Co. are now trying to delay a report that threatens to destroy Minister for Europe Keith Vaz, dubbed Keith Vazeline by journalists "in the know".

● Director of Publicity Paul Golding says that 2001 is....

The year of nationalist mobilisation!

At the end of September 2000, I headed a delegation to France to visit the French nationalist parties the FN and the MNR. A recently joined member who accompanied us was awe-inspired by the way in which the events held by these organisation were so thoroughly mainstream. After seeing organisations that hold basically the same beliefs as the BNP running such large and impressive events, it was in a way depressing to return to Britain and the BNP! We have seen in the last few years mainstream nationalist parties come to prominence all over the continent - in Austria, Belgium, Denmark and Norway to name a few - becoming the main opposition to the corrupt establishments that litter Europe.

The question always being asked is when is it going to happen in Britain? The fact is, it is happening in Britain! And this year, 2001, is going to be the year in which you will see the BNP develop into an embryonic mainstream movement. Politics is going to undergo radical change after the General Election, probably to be held soon. One of two things can happen: The Conservatives can win and William Hague will become Prime Minister, or Tony Blair will hang on although in all probability be forced to enter a coalition government with the Lib-Dems. If the Conservatives win, it will, and can only, be on a populist ticket, with 'Save the Pound' slogans and noises about asylum seekers and crime. If they do win, and the Conservatives take power, we will see a massive let-down where Willy Hague shows his real colours and reneges on each one of his promises. This would mean the end of populist rhetoric from the Tories on traditional BNP issues leaving nothing from the main parties but Political Correctness. If Tony Blair hangs in there and gets his second term, the Conservative party will ditch William Hague and his "tough" strategy, and again, we will see nothing from all the main three parties but Political Correctness. Whatever happens, even though the election itself will be little more than a training exercise for us, we will win! We will be able to position ourselves as the dynamic force of opposition to the corrupt establishment and can begin the battle for Britain without vote-snatching and empty noises from the Tories getting in the way.

The new strategy

Our electoral victories will start during the second term of an unpopular Labour government, with the capture of a council seat or two, and it is important that all organisers recognise the importance of intensive canvassing in the General Election to prepare the way for this. The new strategy - in which victories in small council seats are seen as the springboard to greater recruitment and credibility and our move into the mainstream - seems to be understood throughout the party, but it has created a problem in itself. Every branch and group now seems to have or want a target ward, a target ward in which it can build up its own support in the hope of winning it. This simply isn't going to happen. The proliferation of target wards has to stop. The whole strategy depends on concentrating strength, and not one branch in the BNP has enough activists to mount the type of intensive campaign necessary for victory. The plan will work if several groups and branches within the same region join forces and work side-by-side with the aim of capturing the most promising council seat. It requires two over-riding things to succeed: the necessary concentration of activists and resources to win, which leads onto the second, the willingness to forgo personal or branch glory to work in the pursuit of winning a council seat that may be some miles away. If it isn't done in this way, the plan just isn't going to work. It has therefore been proposed that only one target ward be selected per region, with exceptions being made in very special circumstances. Local conferences should be organised by each region, at which the officials and key activists decide together which seat, or in special circumstances, seats, should be given the bulk of effort. At the same time, however, it is important to make sure that mass leaflet drops in shopping centres and other populous areas continue once every few weeks to make sure that general recruitment doesn't dry up thanks to the concentration of pre-election effort in such a small area. The branches whose target wards are adopted for regional effort should make a special effort to help their neighbours during such events.

Mobilisation

This month marks the first birthday of the Voice of Freedom newspaper. Freedom has been a huge success since it was introduced in mass distribution format a year ago and to mark its birthday this month it has been produced in full colour! The move to a full colour, monthly Identity is also another very clear sign of progress. This month will see the first annual spring rallies, events which, with improved displays and the party's best speakers, are going to be ideal 'first-time' events for potential new recruits. This year is going to see our internet operation overhauled and updated even further, and the establishment of an ambitious pro-nationalist internet radio station. The publicity department is set to expand and grow in sophistication, with a new range of recruitment material range and the involvement of more people with the creation last month of the National Secretaries research network. We have Red-White-and-Blue 2001, already being planned, which is going to be a weekend to remember, far outclassing last year's. The BNP also has many projects planned which are being financed with the launch of our new "Building Blocks" fund which can be found on page 14. The creation of the Group Development department is helping to improve the local party structure, this leading to more new group-sand better run branches. All these things will enable the BNP to exploit the huge opportunity that will occur whatever happens in the General Election.

Conferences, seminars, a full colour monthly Identity, Freedom, elections, rallies, internet advances, more publicity material than ever, training, Red-White-Blue 2001, re-organisation, the party is mobilising, the battle for Britain has begun, it's time for real politics!

• Nick Griffin says it's time for BNP recruitment techniques to use

THE PERSONAL TOUCH TO GET RESULTS!

Britain is full of strange religious sects selling various brands of salvation, and network marketing companies selling all sorts of consumer goods and the dream of getting rich. Many of these concerns are big businesses, despite the fact that what they are selling is generally neither wanted nor needed by the vast majority of the general public. Is there a lesson for us in their relative success?

There should be. Opinion poll after opinion poll shows that our core values are shared by a large majority of our fellow Britons. And, whereas most of the religious cults demand 10 per cent of their members' total income, all the BNP asks is £25 a year.

Better off

Of course, a few potential BNP members encounter a degree of concern from relatives or spouses when they say they're going to join us, but that is nothing compared with the frantic family alarm and hostility almost certain to greet someone who becomes a follower of some obese Asiatic 'guru' with a nice line in Oriental hocus-pocus and a gold-plated Rolls. So how come such unworthy organisations are generally so much larger and better off than we campaigners for the genuinely sacred cause of preserving our own branch of what pre-PC anthropologists called "the Great Race"? Well, let's compare the ways in which we go about recruiting new members. The typical BNP approach is via anonymous leaflet distribution. When an individual responds, we then send an information pack and, in well run areas, the local organiser then calls round to see the enquirer. Just how important the personal call is may be gauged from the following sad but true anecdote.

Lost opportunity

In the last European election, it was decided that the Freepost available to candidates provided a golden opportunity to leaflet parts of the country which had never received BNP leaflets before, but where a combination of white flight and local dissatisfaction with the old parties, suggested that our message would fall on quite a few sympathetic ears. One such area so covered was the far South West of England, where the party spent some £4,000 on election addresses. Those for Cornwall produced more than sixty enquiries. They were promptly all sent information packs, but when it came to follow-ups there was a problem. The South West is a huge region, so expecting the regional organiser to travel to Cornwall to do the follow-ups is like asking someone from London to pop up to Yorkshire. The organiser in question was prepared to take time off work to spend several solid days down there, but couldn't afford to do so unless the party paid for the fuel and for two night's accommodation. This would have been a total of only about £100, but the request was refused. "Anyone who's really worthwhile will join up after reading the information pack," was the explanation. As a result, those follow-ups went undone (though I'm pleased to say that we now have an active group in Plymouth, so the situation has improved for the future) and not a single one of the sixty contacted us again! The lesson is very simple: Leafleting gets follow-ups, but only personal visits turn them into members. We must always see the process through. This is not a surprise. There are some 4,000 books in print on the subject of change theory - the scientific study of how and why individuals adopt new ideas or products, whether soap powders or ideologies.

Only 4% are innovators

The best synopsis is probably The Diffusion of Innovations by Roger Everett. It's a big, academic book, but one only has to read the first few pages to realise that all sorts of organisations with something to sell use the principles it sets out - and that our own techniques have been in the Stone Age by comparison. The crux of the matter is the research which I mentioned in the first half of this article last month. All the evidence is that only about 4 per cent of the population can be classed as 'innovators' - people who can come across a new product or idea and make up their own minds to adopt it. The remaining 96 per cent may look at something new, but they are utterly incapable of 'buying' it off their own backs: they have to see someone else - someone with whom they identify - doing so first. This doesn't mean the 96 per cent are stupid or slow. If the entire population were genetically programmed to try everything new at first sight, we'd probably have died off thousands of years ago when our ancestors first came across some pretty looking toadstools. It's just human nature, and no one and nothing will ever change it.

Identification

The person with whom they identify may be a friend or relative, or it may be the fictitious image of the ideal mum finding her little boy's grubby football kit comes up whiter than white with Sudso. The important thing is that potential 'buyers' see someone else using and approving of the product, and that is what gives them the confidence to try it themselves. Nationalist strategists in the past came fairly close to stumbling on this fact when they identified the need for 'credibility' - and believed that this could be supplied either by a large, impressive-looking march or - once the far-left and the media had developed a set of responses that made such events thoroughly counter-productive - good election results.

Capture rate

But while well-publicised successes undoubtedly do help us to recruit, they almost certainly do so largely by persuading more of the small percentage of innovators that "the BNP can win, so it's worth my while joining them." In other words, they improve our 'capture' rate from a relatively small pool. They don't go very far in meeting the need of the remaining 96 per cent to be able to say "people like me support the BNP, so can I" before they too will join us. This problem has been compounded by the fact that, because nationalist leaders and activists all tend at this early stage in our growth to be drawn from the minority of innovators, we have tended to assume that everyone else out there is just like us. Hence our certainty that we only have to send them an information pack containing all the facts, and they'll see the light and rush to join us. And hence our frustration when they don't! So what do the cults do differently? Some of them 'cold call', but they do so in person, handing their paper or magazine to the individual who answers the door or stops in the street. Straight away the publication isn't something that 'they' have dropped anonymously through the door, but is something that a polite, neatly dressed, smiling person gave them. The fact that it's the biggest load of codswallop since peddlers sold magic charms to banish the plague means that their success rate is very low, but because the apparently normal and decent person who delivered it has already 'bought' its ideas, some other people will as well.

Prospects lists

Much the same is true in Multi-Level Marketing (MLM or Network Marketing). New recruits draw up 'prospect lists' of people they know who they would like to involve in their without spending anything themselves on advertising. These successful businesses have learnt to utilise the human need to identify with others well beyond the initial recruitment stage too.

Testimonials

They also hold big set piece meetings, at which a recurrent feature is the use of 'testimonials' - very short talks by ordinary people, often comparative newcomers to the business, in which they explain why they joined, how much fun they're having, how they've recruited others, and what they're aiming for next. You could have seen exactly the same thing, albeit with a different message, at the huge Methodist rallies several hundred years ago. They had their main national speakers, but they also understood the recruitment value of

A more British example of the use of people in recruitment material, a Labour party European Election leaflet business. They are then sold - often at a subsidised rate just high enough to deter time-wasters - a supply of recruitment material: glossy pamphlets; an introductory video and a batch of pre-recorded cassette tapes which explain the business opportunity to new listeners.

The way to go about it

The aspiring networker is given a few 'pat' approach lines, all of which finish on the lines of "Why not listen to this tape and make up your own mind." The tape, in turn, tells the listener to ask the person who provided it for more information. Many of these approaches fall on stony ground, but the proof of the effectiveness of this system is shown by the way in which the better MLM companies (by which I mean those which actually sell useful products or cheaper essential services, rather than the ones which get rich by making their distributors buy unsaleable junk) have built huge and powerful business empires worldwide having 'unknown' locals, even the shy and perhaps somewhat inarticulate, making public witness to their new faith. It's very simple really: human nature is unchanging, and recruitment tactics that work with human nature are bound to be more productive than those that ignore it.

Future techniques

So while it is very important that we carry on distributing growing quantities of the leaflets that, at very little cost, recruit new members from the huge numbers of that innovative four per cent who have still had no contact with us, and get us local media publicity which brings us to the attention of even more of them, it is also time for us to find ways to improve our appeal to the 96 per cent who need a more personal touch. The list on this page explains the main ways the BNP leadership is working on to make this happen - and suggests several ways in which you can get involved as well. Together, we can make it happen!

PUTTING THE IDEA INTO PRACTICE

■ We are now making a point of putting more real people in our recruitment material. The best example is the regular interview we're running in each issue of ID. Sometimes these will be with well-known party figures, but at other times we'll be talking to 'ordinary' people about their role in our extraordinary struggle. If you want to volunteer, please get in touch!

■ While we will be addressing the need to create an internal programme of ideological education designed to ensure that our members grasp the truly radical nature of our programme, we will also be laying a greater emphasis in our external recruitment material on individuals in the party. It's not a matter of an unthinking personality cult; it's a matter of more effective recruitment.

■ You may get asked to give a testimonial at a big BNP meeting. If you do, keep it short and remember its purpose. Just be yourself, because that's what you're there for. If you turn out to be a natural public speaker you'll get plenty more chances to display your talent, so don't overrun your allocated time in what's bound to be a tight schedule.

■ Remember that producing a large run of a tape cassette specially designed for us in such personal recruitment approaches, is one of the items on the BNP's Building Blocks Fund 'shopping list'. The quicker we reach our target, the sooner we can add this string to the party's recruitment bow.

■ Fortunately, you don't have to wait until the tape comes out to run your own personal recruitment campaign - one of the best possible weapons is in your hands at this very moment! Pass it on to someone you know who would be a real asset to the party. And how about deciding to take ten copies each month from now on and make giving them to your own list of 'prospects' a regular routine?

RALLIES FOR BRITAIN!

With the exception of our Scottish, South West of England and Ulster people, no BNP member will have more than a couple of hours' journey to get to one or other of the two big Spring rallies being held soon.

For the first time ever, we're holding twin events, one in the North and one in the South, so that no one except the main speakers and the display team has to travel too far to be part of the excitement and enthusiasm of a big British National Party meeting. With a range of top national and regional speakers at each meeting, this is an ideal opportunity for you to bring along a friend or relative who is sympathetic but who hasn't quite made up their mind to get involved.

The party of Britain!

They'll find that the BNP is made up of decent people just like them, and that we're only putting into words and actions what they already think. There couldn't be an easier way to recruit people - just bring them along to the meeting nearest to you!

Rallies for Britain!

Meeting point venues will be circulated to regional and local organisers nearer the date, as will contact telephone numbers for isolated members who will need to make their own way there. All you need to do for the time being is to keep one or other date free, and to get to work to persuade someone you know would make a good additional recruit to come along with you. See you on the 24th February or the 3rd March!

Party Chairman Nick Griffin speaking at an earlier BNP rally.

● Dr. Phil Edwards attacks the multiracialists' plans to destroy

THE RICH TAPESTRY OF HUMAN KIND

The Politically Correct (though scientifically incorrect) liberal position is that the only difference between black people and white people is "skin colour." But this Scientifically Incorrect superstition is beginning to lose its grip - even at that ultra-PC BBC. In December 2000, Channel 4 carried a series of four remarkable programmes called 'The Difference' which explored inherited racial variation, albeit very cautiously.

The series used the most obvious racial difference - skin colour - as an example of how a random genetic mutation which confers a survival advantage on the individual in which occurs (such as lighter skin in low-intensity light areas such as Northern Europe, or darker skin in sub-Saharan Africa) is likely to be passed in increasing frequency to future generations. But then, in a BBC 'first', the programmes went on to show that the same process has led to a huge range of other racial differences as well. Viewers were told that the scientifically-proven existence of such inherited racial variations exploded the "two extremes" of the debate. The first was characterised as racial supremacism, where one race is considered to be 'better' than others. The second 'extreme' that the programme slammed was the belief that all races are the same. Channel Four thus confirmed the correctness of the BNP's moderate, commonsense position that the races are neither equal nor unequal, but simply different.

Differences

'The Difference' featured the cluster of runners of Olympic-class and world record holders in one tiny region of Kenya where 12 out of the world's top 20 long distance runners were born. Studies indicate that this talent has a strong genetic component,

Due to inherited genetic difference, some Oriental peoples face problems with drinking alcohol linked to an increased number of oxygen carrying red blood cells, a favourable genetic adaptation for people living 7000 feet above sea level. A geneticist commented that that different races have different strengths, due to a particular gene, and the Kenyan runners have a variation of this gene - it is slightly longer, giving greater staying power. Deniers of genetic difference like to point out that humans and chimpanzees share 98.4% of the same genes and that genetic differences between members of different races are too small to be of any influence. But the "slightly longer" variant of the gene found in the Kenyan runners illustrates how a very small difference can influence human achievement in a spectacular and disproportionate way. Genetic inheritance can have profound effects on how different races respond to certain foodstuffs. For example, individuals whose ancestors evolved in South Asia but who were themselves born in the UK have a 40% higher risk of coronary heart disease and diabetes than do whites, the result of a clash between Western food and an ancient genetic mutation which allowed Asians to live on a meagre diet through famine.

Ancestral inheritance

Similarly, the inability of many adult blacks and Asians to digest cows' milk without getting stomach cramps and flu-like symptoms is something that has been 'bred out' of races which have kept dairy cattle for thousands of years. Alcohol poses similar problems, illustrated on the programme where Korean, Japanese and Chinese students showed discomfort and nausea after a sip of a drink containing ethyl alcohol, whereas the white students continued to drink unaffected. Again, genetic adaptation is responsible; many generations of East Asians survived by sterilizing their drinking water by boiling it for tea, whereas our ancestors turned it into beer, leading to genetic selection favouring individuals who could metabolise alcohol (an ability to take drink is a worthy and long standing tradition in the UK after all!).

More differences

One of the most interesting and revealing parts of the programme dealt with Australian Aborigines who possess much better visual and special skills than do white Australians. When tested by having to memorise and duplicate the position of 12 objects on a board, Aboriginal children - including those brought up in westernised homes - had a 50% better score than whites, even when these children were living in a westernised part of Australia. The brains of Aborigines are different to those of whites, with 25% bigger visual cortex regions. These studies, and the far reaching implication that the physiology of the brain and abilities have a large genetic (inherited) component, were considered too controversial to publish and are unlikely to continue, even though they show that - in one respect at least, Aborigines are 'superior' to whites.

Rich diversity

The distinguished American sociologist Charles Murray, co-author of The Bell Curve, (the book which sparked a furore when it first appeared because it dealt with IQ differences between different races), concluded the series by saying "Is there a difference in test scores between blacks and whites, based on standardised tests of mental abilities, free from cultural bias? Undoubtedly yes." As more inherited differences are found in people whose ancestors evolved in separate parts of the world, it raises the question about the wisdom and the desirability of destroying this rich, natural diversity by mass immigration and enforced multiracialism. Fortunately, increasing awareness of the scientifically established reality of such differences is undermining the old egalitarian dogmas and making it ever easier for those of us who champion human genetic and cultural diversity to win the argument.

INTERVIEW WITH NICK CASS NEW DEWSBURY ORGANISER

Dewsbury is an area with huge potential for the BNP, yet it has lain effectively untouched for some years owing to lack of an effective organiser. This gap has now, fortunately, been filled by NICK CASS. Under his leadership, Dewsbury BNP is making real progress. Identity salutes the work of the party's local organisers all over the country, and is pleased to carry this interview with one of the individuals who make the party 'tick'.

Nick had a very successful career as a squash player

ID: When did you first join the BNP, and why?

Nick: I can't remember when I actually joined the Party but I'd been interested in it for over ten years. I was given an old BNP newspaper as a teenager and living in Dewsbury I saw that what the paper was saying reflected my own experiences. It really began to sink in years later when I was doing a lot of travelling around Europe playing sport. I saw that every single white country is facing the same problems as Britain, it wasn't a unique British problem but danger to every European people.

ID: We understand that you're a very good squash player. What level did you reach?

Nick: Yes I was pretty good. Throughout the age groups in Britain, I was from 11 years old either number one or number two in the country. I was Yorkshire number one in every age group and at the age of eighteen I played in the world junior championships in Hong Kong where I came third. I was also England number one in the team event and was the only British winner in the final where we lost to Australia 2-1. I then spent six months at the Australian Institute of sport, before playing the world circuit for three years.

ID: Is there any similarity in the attitudes needed to be a good sportsman and those needed to be an effective political organiser?

Nick: Yes, you need to be mentally tough. You need to overcome the inevitable disappointments and get back to the task at hand. You need to always keep fighting no matter what, never give up and just keep plugging away day after day and you will eventually get the result. My Aussie coach always had a saying "Winners Make It Happen" "Losers Let It Happen", and I believe that to be 100% correct - you get out what you put in. The same is true with politics.

ID: Tell us a bit about yourself.

Nick: I'm 27, born and bred in Yorkshire, I left school with six GCSE at sixteen to become a professional squash player. At present I work full time and live with my fiancée and six-month-old son. I have a lovely large close family with two brothers and two sisters and they all give me great support. My hobbies are walking and the great outdoors in general, dogs and leading a healthy, active lifestyle.

ID: What made you decide to become a local BNP organiser?

Nick: I was sick of so many people holding the same views as me and complaining at the way they were being treated, but nobody was doing anything about it. The post was open so with encouragement from my fiancée I decided to accept the role. I felt no other party defends the white population politically. I decided to that if no one else had the guts to represent the normal everyday working man in my area, then I would.

ID: What was the most daunting

• Laugh of the month:

FIRST MEETING OF NEW TORY SPLINTER GROUP FLOPS!

The Conservative party suffered a minor blow when a tiny group of 'former' Tories held the first meeting of their new 'Freedom Party' (or more correctly the Free-of-em Party!) in a spit-and-no-sawdust pub in Tipton on 27th January.

Extremist connections

Strangely, for a new group which claims it is determined to avoid the 'Nazi' tag, the date picked was Holocaust Remembrance Day, which leaves them wide open to a media smear about their being 'anti-Jewish', even though their Eddy Butler claims to "despise anti-Semitism."

"We've got to get rid of the words 'nationalism' and 'patriotism'."

Mike Newland

The amateurish inexperience which led to this error is repeated in their party name. This is a gift to opponents, who only have to point out that it's a slavish copy of Die Freiheit Partei of Joerg Haider, "the extremist whose political career took a nose-dive after he praised fellow Austrian Adolf Hitler's employment policies and the Waffen SS, blah, blah." This is quite apart from the manifest failure to exclude from the meeting those with criminal records and extremist connections - and that's just amongst its leading lights! Around 40 people attended the meeting, only one third of the number Freiheit Partei stooges Steve and Sharron Edwards said went to their last anti-BNP rally. Of these, three were thrown out of the meeting

- one of them having been loudly accused of "working for MI5"! A further four or five found they couldn't take the combination of boredom and liberalism, and walked out.

Toryism

The steadily shrinking audience were shocked when Michael Newland, explaining just how moderate the new 'party' is going to be, told them that "we've got to get rid of the words 'nationalism' and 'patriotism'." It was clear from the appalled faces of

Mike Newland: use to criticise the Bloomsbury Forum as "useless cowards", but has now joined their party everyone except the group's 'leadership' that the one good thing that will come out of this stroke of tactical genius is that, if another Freiheit Partei meeting is held in the same pub, it will not be necessary to lash out £10 for the upstairs meeting room - the broom cupboard in the public bar would do, and is available free of

Flags

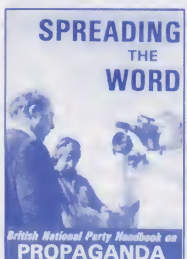

The BNP has the following flags in stock: Union Jack flag; St. George's flag; St. Andrew's flag; Welsh flag and the Ulster flag. All flags are priced at £6. Use flags to decorate meetings.

Handbooks

BNP Activists' Handbook This handbook is a complete instruction course in all the essential techniques needed in promoting and building the BNP at local level, starting from scratch when the activist is entirely alone. This booklet is a mine of information that all activists, old and new, will find valuable in the quest to make their activities more efficient and effective. It is a 'must' for everyone who wants to be more than just an armchair nationalist. The handbook is illustrated and runs to 71 pages. £2.00 post-free.

BNP Propaganda handbook Spreading the Word deals with propaganda and supplements the Activists' Handbook. Illustrated, Spreading the Word is 60 pages and contains five sections: (1) Principles of Propaganda; (2) Recruitment; (3) Canvassing for Elections; (4) Speaking to the Media; and (5) Public speaking and presentation of Party meetings. Special attention is also given to dealing with enemy smears. £2.00 post-free.

Videos

All these videos are ideal to show to family or friends, or for use at local BNP meetings if a main speaker is not available. Use them to help speed up the political education of new recruits, or to inspire 'old hands' to that vital bit of extra effort. TV is a powerful weapon — use it to help build the BNP!

■ Rally January 1997 Video of the postponed 1996 BNP Annual Rally, held in London on January 25th 1997. Speeches by Dr. Donald Stevens, Nick Griffin, Richard Edmonds, John Tyndall and overseas guest Jose Ramos. Rally '95. Video of the BNP Annual Rally, staged in London on November 11th 1995. Hear and see speeches by John Morse, Richard Edmonds, Thomas Andersson, Michael Newland and John Tyndall. This video is £15.00 each plus 83p p&p.

■ Rally November 1997 was the party's second major rally of that year, and was notable for the excellent and dynamic regional reports from around the country demonstrating the progress the party had made in the wake of the 1997 General Election. See and hear BNP Regional Organisers, as well as main speakers: John Tyndall, Richard Edmonds and Nick Griffin with Dave Bruce in the chair. Price £15 plus 83p p&p.

Belt Buckles

The party has the following belt buckles in stock: British Bulldog belt buckle; St. George belt buckle; and various Celtic designs. All priced at £8.

Leaflets

■ DO YOU THINK? Currently the party's best leaflet. "Do you think" has been reworked and reprinted in the hundreds of thousands. As a result, this two-sided, two-colour leaflet has come down in price by a full £1 per thousand to just £7 for 1,000.

■ CRIME LEAFLET With soaring crime rates hitting inner city, suburban and rural areas alike, this leaflet's mixture of hard facts and humour should prove a winner all over the country. Price £8 for 1,000.

■ BANKS LEAFLET This innovative approach positions the BNP as the only party campaigning for a fair deal for the many millions of customers who are sick to death of being ripped off by 'their' banks. Price £8 for 1,000.

■ IMMIGRATION LEAFLET Draws attention to the shocking figures that show Britons will be a minority by 2060. A real eye-opener. Price £8 for 1,000.

■ HANG CHILD MOLESTERS LEAFLET Ever popular call to hang child murderers. Price £6 for 1,000.

Postage rates for all 5 leaflets are £5.65/1,000 & £6.45/2,000

Please note this fact, which is of great importance: the books sold through Freedom Books are written by many different authors, holding a number of different political viewpoints, very few of them being in any way connected with Freedom Books' parent, the British National Party. The party's mail order book service distributes these books because it is felt that they fill important gaps in public information and understanding of vital national and international issues. This does not mean that all the content of the books should be taken as representative of the policies of the party. The party reserves the right to differ with some of the authors over some parts of their writings.

AGRICOLA and GERMANIA (Tacitus) 6.99. The great Roman historian describes our Celtic and German ancestors in about 100 AD. Two books in one volume. This ed. 1970, 175pp.

AMERICA'S DECLINE: THE EDUCATION OF A CONSERVATIVE (Prof. Revilo P. Oliver) £4.50. A collection of articles and reviews on various aspects of the collapse of modern civilisation. 1981, 375pp.

...AND THE TRUTH SHALL SET YOU FREE (David Icke) £13.50. A very individual and controversial study of the global financial and political elite. 1995, 474pp.

ANGLO-SAXONS, THE (ed Campbell) £15.00. A handsome, well-illustrated book covering the history of England and the culture of its people from the 4th to 11th century. With leftist teachers and curriculum advisors doing all they can to undermine knowledge of, and pride in, our ancestors, among the younger generation, it is important that nationalist activists get books like these into the hands of their own growing children. 1982 rep. 1991, 272pp.

ARTHUR'S BRITAIN (Leslie Alcock) £9.99. Convincing picture of life between the 4th and 7th centuries when Celtic Britain was abandoned by the legions to the Picts, Scots and Anglo-Saxons. 1971 (rep 1989) 437pp.

BABYLONIAN WOE, THE (David Astle) £17.00. A study of the origin of certain financial practices and their effects on the events of ancient history, written in the light of the present day. 1975, 250pp.

BEGINNINGS OF ENGLISH HISTORY, THE (Dorothy Whitelock) £6.99. Describes Anglo-Saxon culture and organisation and relations with the Celts between the leaving of the Romans and the coming of the Normans, 1952, this ed. 1991, 256pp.

BELL CURVE (Richard J. Herrnstein & Charles Murray) £25.00. This important book, which has aroused enormous controversy in the USA, deals with differences in intellectual capacity among people and groups. Ways in which these could be accounted for by environmental influences are examined, and accorded the remarkably small amount of weight they deserve. 1994, xxvi, 845pp.

BLAIR'S BRITAIN (Hal Colebatch) £7.95. The threat posed by the present Cultural Revolution, supported by the Labour Government, to our national identity. 1999, 158pp. Highly recommended!

BRITAIN'S FUTURE: THE MEANING OF THE MAASTRICHT TREATY (Prof. Stephen Bush) £1.25. A strong plea for British independence from EC bureaucracy. 1990 (rep. 1993), 24pp.

BRITISH ISLES, THE (Hugh Kearney) £7.95. Subtitled 'A history of four nations' this is an outline of British history by an academic historian stressing the role of the non-English parts of the British Isles. 1989, 324pp.

CALL IT CONSPIRACY (Larry Abraham) £14.00. Shows how socialism is a product of the wealthy, and how money manipulation has disastrous political consequences. 1985, xvii, 325pp.

CAMP OF THE SAINTS, THE (Jean Raspail) £5.00. A welcome reissue of this sensational novel about the destruction of the white race by Asian immigrant invasion. Once on sale in ordinary bookshops, but now only available from the nationalist underground. One of the great works of fiction of the second half of the 20th century. 1973, 311pp.

CASE FOR DAVID IRVING, THE (Nigel Jackson) £12.50. A study of the organisations and individuals seeking to suppress the historian David Irving's freedom to travel and communicate and of the smear campaign against him. The book relates largely to Mr. Irving's efforts to get into Australia. 1994, xi, 208pp.

CELTIC MYTHS AND LEGENDS (D.W. Rolleston) £1.99. The myths of the founders of Britain. First published early this century, reprinted 1994, 457pp.

CENSORED HISTORY (Eric Butler) £4.00. An examination of some of the facts of recent history that have not found their way into textbooks or newspapers. A welcome return to print. 1974, 48pp.

CHURCHILL'S GRAND ALLIANCE (John Charmley) £20.00. A study of the Anglo-American relationship 1940-57 showing the disastrous consequences of Churchill's faith in US friendship. 1995, xv, 427pp.

CHURCHILL'S WAR (David Irving) £16.95. The highly controversial story of Britain's WW II leader. 1987, 591pp.

CHURCHILL: THE END OF GLORY (John Charmley) £30.00. This massive work follows in the footsteps of David Irving in its demolition of the myth of Churchill as a great national leader, though the author is less scathing in his treatment of his subject than is Irving. 1993, 742pp.

COLLAPSE OF BRITISH POWER, THE (Correlli Barnett) £10.99. Vitally important book which shows how liberalism and lack of political realism brought about Britain's 20th century decline in the political, industrial and military fields. A classic work by a mainstream historian More relevant by the year! 643pp.

COME CLEAN, MR. GABLE (Alexander Baron) £1.50. Gerry Gable exploits the Stephen Lawrence murder, but has used exactly the sort of violent hoodlums who committed it. 1998, 7 A4 pp.

CONSPIRACY OR DEGENERACY? (Prof. Revilo P. Oliver) £4.00. Text of a lecture by the author, a brilliant classical scholar, to New England rally for God, Family and Country 1966. 76pp.

CONTROVERSY OF ZION, THE (Douglas Reed) £17.75. A best seller in nationalist circles ever since its publication. A study of Jewish-Gentile relations since biblical times, packed with little known and long suppressed facts. 1979, 580pp.

CRIMES AND MERCIES (James Bacque) £8.99. The hidden story of the biggest wave of 'ethnic cleansing' in European history. 288pp.

DEADLIER THAN THE H-BOMB (Leonard Young) £2.00. Important work on the money power and its threat to the freedom of mankind. The author was a distinguished RAF officer and active nationalist. 1956, rep. 1992, 72pp.

DISCRIMINATE OR BE DAMNED! (John Fairbanks Kerr) £8.25. An Australian author describes how anti-discrimination legislation in Australia, the UK and the US has resulted in absurdities and injustices. 1995, vii, 126pp.

DISPOSSESSED MAJORITY, THE (Wilmot Robertson) £15.50. This book has attracted worldwide attention, dealing as it does with racial problems in America and not just simply the black-white situation. A comprehensive introduction to a subject very relevant to Britain. 1981, 613pp.

EUROPE'S FULL CIRCLE: CORPORATE ELITES AND THE NEW FASCISM (Rodney Atkinson) 7.95. Argues that the EU is fascist and corporatist in inspiration. Discusses the Bilderberg Group, the CIA and internationalists such as Arnold Tynbee and Joseph Retinger. 1996, 149pp.

FAMILY, KIN AND CITY-STATE: The Racial Underpinning of Ancient Greece and Rome (Numa Denis Fustel de Coulanges and J. Jamieson) £6.50 including p&p. A study in politically incorrect history. The role of multiracialism created by the rich in the downfall of both these great White civilisations. 1999.

FORCED WAR, THE (David L. Hoggan)

£21.00. Described by Harry Elmer Barnes as "...the first thorough study of responsibility for the causes of the Second World War...the definitive revisionist work on the subject." 1989, 732pp.

FROM ROME TO MAASTRICHT (Brian Burkitt, Mark Baimbridge and Stephen Reed) £1.50. A reappraisal of Britain's membership of the European Community. 1992, 69pp.

GLOBAL TYRANNY... STEP BY STEP (William F. Jasper) £12.50. How the United Nations is being developed as an omnipotent global government, suppressing national identities and freedom. 1992 xvii, 350pp.

GREAT AMERICAN BETRAYAL, THE (Patrick Buchanan) £16.50. How American sovereignty and social justice are being sacrificed to the gods of the global economy. A powerful plea for national freedom and social justice with great relevance to the UK. 1998, 376pp.

HATE COMES TO TOWN (Alexander Baron) £1.50. The lies and poison of the Searchlight 'Educational' Trust, documented, exposed and deconstructed. 1999, 25pp (A4)

HEREDITY & HUMANITY (Roger Pearson) £9.65. Cover race, eugenics and modern science. A scholarly but eminently readable criticism of egalitarianism by the holder of a Ph.D. in Anthropology. 1996, 162pp.

HIDDEN MENACE TO WORLD PEACE (James Gibb Stuart) £10.00. A well-known advocate of monetary reform deals also with secret politics, media censorship and the movement towards a 'new world order'. 1993, 233pp.

HOLLYWOOD PARTY (Kenneth Billingsley) £16.99. The story of the attempted communist takeover of Hollywood in the '30s and '40s. The truth about the blacklist and HUAC hearings. A must for students of media lies. 1998, 365pp.

IDEOLOGY OF OBSESSION (David Baker) £35. Study of the life and thought of A.K. Chesterton, one of the major figures in British nationalism from the '30s to the '70s. Generally fair. 1996, xiii, 250pp.

IMPERIUM (Ulrich Varange) £15.00. One of the most important nationalist philosophical books of the post-war period. The author rejects Marx, Freud and other 'culture distorters' and demolishes the whole ideology of 'liberalism.' Originally published 1948, 625pp.

KILLING OF THE COUNTRYSIDE, THE (Graham Harvey) £7.99. A former farming journalist describes the havoc wrought by subsidised 'agri-business' on the environment of rural Britain, on taxpayers and on the rapidly shrinking number of independent farmers. A truly shocking and important book. Paperback.

LAST SECRET, THE (Nicholas Bethell) £7.99. The disgraceful story of how the anti-Communist Cossacks were forcibly handed over for slaughter by the Soviets between 1944 and 1947.

LEMMING FOLK, THE (James Gibb Stuart) £7.95. A witty and factual examination of current attitudes and intellectual fashions that are threatening our future. 1980, 246pp.

MARCO POLO REPORT (Institute of Historical Review) £13.00. The extraordinary story of how international pressure groups compelled a popular Japanese magazine to close after it published an article on revisionism. 1995, 30 A4pp.

MAN AND TECHNICS (Oswald Spengler) £3.95. Argues that the world is governed by natural forces in man and nature, rather than by genteel political and religious creeds. c.1930, rep. 1992, 73pp.

MONEY BOMB, THE (James Gibb Stuart) £4.25. Discusses the failure of our debt-based financial system and describes its role in creating inflation. 1983, 158pp.

NAMELESS WAR, THE (Capt. A.H.M. Ramsay) £8.00. An outline of the secret history of the events leading up to the Second World War. The author was imprisoned without trial for four years during World War II, despite his status as a member of parliament. Originally published 1952, 128pp.

NATURAL LAW OF RACE RELATIONS (Laszlo F. Thomay) £7.50. An examination of racial tensions in a number of areas, showing that they are based not on hate or bigotry but on natural, universal tendencies. 1993, 145pp.

NEW UNHAPPY LORDS, THE (A.K. Chesterton) £6.00. An exposure of the financial power that seeks to dragoon mankind into a global police state. 1972, 288pp.

ONE WORLD, READY OR NOT (William Greider) £9.99. Subtitled The manic logic of global capitalism, shows the threat posed by the global economy to the societies and economies of individual nations by currency transfers and the shifting of production to low-wage countries. Mainstream demolition of fashionable economic dogma. 1997, 582pp.

PHILOSOPHY OF NATIONALISM, THE (C. C. Josey) £10. Eminent scholar argues that civilisation is based on ethnically homogeneous nations. 1923, rep. 1983, 227pp.

POPULISM AND ELITISM (Prof. Revilo P. Oliver) £4.00. A study of the purpose and function of political power and the elements which wield it in the present century. 1982, 101pp.

RACE, INTELLIGENCE AND EDUCATION. 50p. Produced by a group of nationalist teachers in reply to an NUT race-mixing booklet. Packed with facts and cogent argument. 1979, 20 A4 pages.

RACE AND REALITY (Carlton Putnam) £4.00. A companion volume and supplement to Race and Reason, showing how the truth about the race issue has been suppressed by interested parties. 1967 (rep. 1977), 192pp.

RACE AND REASON (Carlton Putnam) £4.00. A plain, unemotional account of the race issue that has been an invaluable contribution to the debate for many years. 1961 (rep. 1977), 125pp.

RACES OF BRITAIN, THE (John Beddoe) £17.00. A reprint of a scholarly work on the Celts, Anglo-Saxons, Vikings and Normans, with information on related peoples of Europe. 1885 rep 1983, vi, 273pp.

thing when you started up?

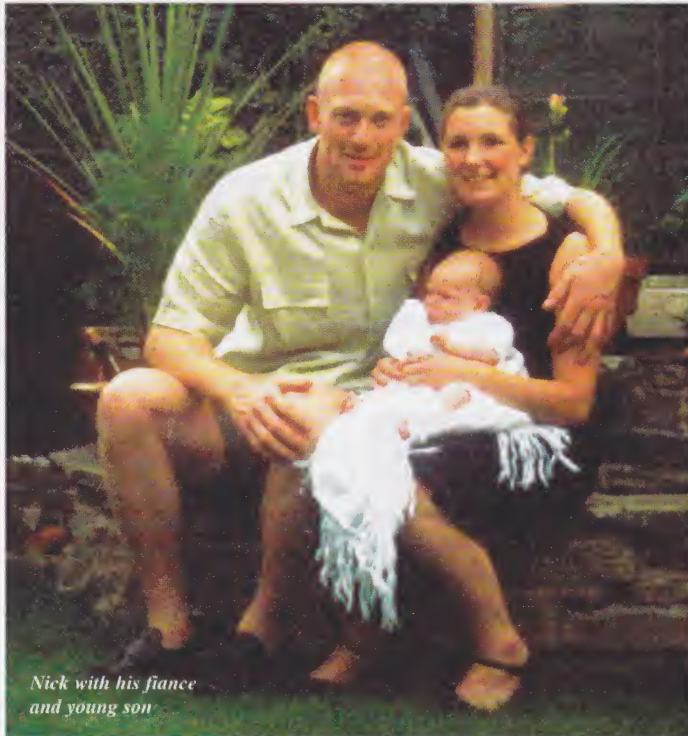

Nick: The most daunting thing was how people would react to our message, and how they would respond to me. I was also a little nervous going to visit new people interested in the party, but all my fears quickly disappeared because I have had an overwhelmingly good response. I now really enjoy follow-ups because it really highlights what the average everyday person is thinking. You become a vent for their anger, because you are the first political activist that they have ever spoke to that they can trust, and who represents them.

ID: Now you've got some experience, what are you doing to build the BNP in Dewsbury?

Nick: At present we have been concentrating on visiting the new follow-ups and getting them involved in one way or another with the party. We have also been doing a lot of leafleting in the area twice every week, as well as targeting younger people with the very easy to read Young BNP leaflet, which has had a very good response from local youngsters. We'll be standing in the local council elections next year.

ID: You were a fully paid up member of the Trafalgar Club last year. Are you rejoining this year and, if so, why?

Nick: Yes I'm definitely joining

Nick with his fiancée and young son the Trafalgar Club this year. If you care enough about your country and people then £3 a week is no problem to anyone, no matter how skint. It's purely a case of where your values lie, in your wallet or in the fight for our children's future.

ID: How would you describe the situation facing white people in Dewsbury these days?

Nick: The situation for white people in Dewsbury is very grim. We have racial disturbances of one form or another every week, and the problems only seem to get worse and more often. The local council I believe promotes massive double standards discriminating against the white community, setting up special schemes for ethnic minorities only, jobs for ethnic minorities only and even swimming lessons and schools for ethnic minorities only. Everything that white people are denied.

ID: What proportion of local whites know what is going on, and how many of them object?

Nick: I believe the majority of locals know what is going on, but are to afraid to speak out because they feel nobody will help them. I feel more and more people are beginning to at last speak out against the most blatant double standards, it certainly seems that way with the response I have got. That is why it is so vital to get out and talk to the average bloke to let him know we are there. We really are the voice of the silent majority and the more people I have met the more I realise it.

ID: So just how much potential is there for the BNP in places like Dewsbury?

Nick: I believe the BNP has huge potential and simply fulfilling that potential involves becoming a credible alternative to the other parties. We are the party with the right policies at the right time. With hard work, getting involved with the community and building a trustworthy relationship with the people we can first take local council seats and then, who knows, maybe one day I'll have Ann Taylor's job. We've got to aim high, keep working hard and our time will come.

charge! The general air of unreality was topped off by the contribution of the new leader, batchelor Jonathan Bowden, whose strangled imitation upper class vowels and soft voice might go down well with his friends in the Spinning Top Club when this eclectic group of homosexuals and ultra-right intellectuals meet to discuss obscure artists, but his two speeches didn't cut much ice with the locals.

A complete flop

Not surprisingly, they also seemed a trifle underwhelmed by the fact that the previous highlights of his political career were as 'leader' of the absurd Revolutionary Conservative Caucus, and getting himself expelled from the Monday Club. All in all it was little wonder that the contribution of the local guests to the collection didn't even cover the petrol costs of the 'leaders', who were overheard discussing the unsuitability of the down-market venue before they headed back to London, aware for the first time just how little support their pitiful venture has in what they thought was its 'stronghold'. The fact that

Sharron Edwards, 4 parties in 5 years, a career of disruption and subversion

BNP members from all over the East and West Midlands, Wales, Lancashire and Yorkshire had been invited but stayed away in droves only added to the disappointment. These people have been planning to launch their 'new party' for a very long time. Michael Newland first proposed it as far back as 24th December 1996, when he wrote to BNP stalwart Colin Smith about his "Plan B," and said of its new name "I would favour 'Freedom Party'." He also wrote that this should go ahead even if the BNP elected a new leader, because, he said, things wouldn't change under Griffin. Curiously, at the same time as he was preaching moderation to Colin Smith and others, he was funding the 'hardline' magazine The Rune, writing its distinctly racist 'Sen Demback' column, and telling its producers that he thought they'd "got the balance right." Just what was he playing at?

Losers

His colleagues in the Bloombsbury/Billingsgate Forum (including Bowtie Bowden) agreed with Newland when he was wearing his 'moderate' hat, and almost unveiled their new party toy twice before, in advance of, and during, the BNP leadership election in 1999. Each time, however, they lost their nerve, because they didn't have anyone willing to try to win the council seat that they foolishly believe would be enough to transform their six men and a dog operation into a nationwide political party. Then, last Spring, they found their 'foot soldiers' - Mr and Mrs

Edwards, who had already stolen the BNP membership list in pursuit of their personal takeover bid for the third political party of their thoroughly disruptive career.

Good riddance

Together, they launched a concerted, groundless campaign of character assassination aimed at discrediting the BNP's new leadership and clearing the way for a coup that would put them in charge. "We've got the Bloombsbury Forum right behind us," the Edwardses boasted last July. Indeed they have, but that's their problem!

WHITE VICTIMS' SUPPORT GROUP!

A White Victims' Support Group is one of the items on the "shopping list" for our £14,000 Building Blocks appeal. British National Party Chairman Nick Griffin explains what this will entail in more detail...

The White Victims' Support Group will use local leaflets and the Internet to draw attention to the plight of the native Britons who now make up the majority of victims of racial attacks in an increasing number of areas. These forgotten victims desperately need someone to speak out on their behalf, and the British National Party intends to do just that!

Advantages

Additionally, we believe that there is great recruitment and vote-gathering potential in encouraging local activists to make contact with white victims of racial crime or their families who are ignored by the "anti-racist" establishment. But we know from experience that many are too scared of the PC thought police and by media smears to accept an approach directly from the British National Party, hence the need for a non-political group to act as a 'halfway house' where they feel at home and can find out for themselves that they are not alone.

Potential

This group has the potential to grow into something really big, but all we need to start the ball rolling is £500 and contact from interested individuals.

NATIONALIST RADIO IS WITHIN OUR GRASP!

The Internet has a reputation for being tediously slow, nick-named the World-Wide-Wait, but at long last British Telecom have finally started to roll out their much-vaunted high speed Internet access service, ADSL (Asymmetric Digital Subscriber Line) which is going to revolutionise the way in which we can use this powerful medium.

Although nowhere near as fast as initially promised, ADSL, should still guarantee access speeds at least ten times as fast as connections with conventional modems. That's quite a jump isn't it? You would expect Britain's favourite dissident organisation to have plans for making full use of it - and you'd be right!

Internet Radio station

Although data transfer rates of 0.5 MB per second do not come anywhere near the speed needed to sustain high quality, full-screen video we would need for a virtual TV station, there are still plenty of avenues open for us to explore. Perhaps one of the most interesting possibilities concerns the concept of a nationalist Internet radio station. We already have the resources to compress our own material and stream it from our websites, but what we have in mind is a little bit more ambitious.

Widely available ADSL connections will enable us not only to improve dramatically the quality of our output, it will also enable us to stream (a process that allows for quicker viewing by removing the need to "download" material) much larger files. In short, in the not too distant future there should be no reason why someone couldn't listen to material produced by nationalists 24 hours a day. However, that's only half the story! Over the last few years music industry profits have been steadily hemorrhaging due to the increasing availability of free music over the Internet. Even young school children have the computer savvy to download CD-quality music files (MP3s) via sharing programmes such as "Napster", thereby avoiding paying money for CDs.

The options

Music moguls have thus had to make a much more realistic appraisal of the situation (not that nationalists should shed any tears for an industry that has been used so blatantly to promote ethnophilia, miscegenation and white racial self-flagellation). Record industry bosses, faced with an overnight and complete collapse of a formerly highly lucrative industry have decided to settle for a smaller slice of the action. For instance, for a one-off, yearly payment to two copy-right licensing authorities the new patriotic station will be entitled to play almost any kind of published music over the Internet as often as it wishes.

A powerful medium

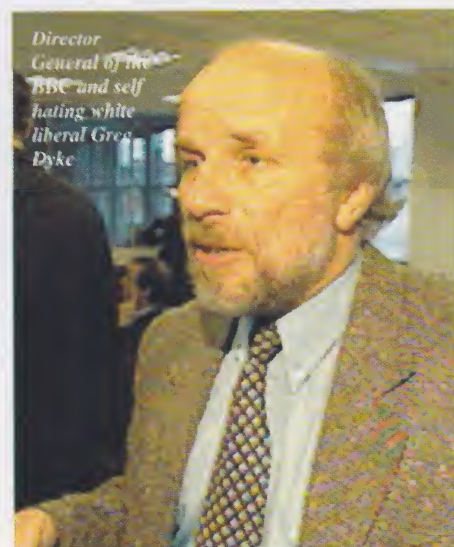

Although, obviously needing much thought and pre-planning, nationalist radio is an exciting concept isn't it? Of course there would be a great deal of music we wouldn't want to broadcast, the celebration of drug-taking, homicide and abusing women also known as rap music, for instance. However, a patriotic radio show using suitable music to encapsulate our message so softening it for public ingestion would be a powerful tool indeed. Unlike other radio stations, this one certainly won't have a ratings problem, once the mainstream media got wind of patriots using "their" product...need I say more? Furthermore, it's hardly as if there will be any real competition! A graphic reminder of the political sentiments of those who currently control our media recently came from non-other than Greg Dyke, supremo of the absurdly named British Broadcasting Corporation.

"Hideously white"

Not content with words such as "majority" or "predominantly", Labour placeman Dyke chose to select the phrase "hideously white". Just what kind of sick and twisted mentality must this man possess in order to despise his own kind so much? What luxury it will be when British nationalists can broadcast to our nation the truth about these treacherous and self-loathing left-liberals who occupy such very powerful and influential positions in our society.

● Director of Group Development Tony Lecomber explains the new constitution

A CONSTITUTION FIT FOR THE TWENTY-FIRST CENTURY

In 1989 I made my first suggestion for change to the party's Constitution which had become dated since the party's foundation in 1982. At the time, to be fair, the change wasn't wildly pressing and it was quietly forgotten.

So it was natural that, having an interest in the party's Constitution, I would be asked to look at it and suggest improvement. This I did at the end of 1999, and together with party Chairman Nick Griffin we came up with the first major revision of the party's Constitution in its entire history. At a General Members' Meeting held in Milton Keynes in March last year, those present voted unanimously for amendments to Sections 1, 4, 5 and 13 of the present Constitution. A minor amendment of my own to Section 4 was carried overwhelmingly.

Wide-ranging changes

After securing change to these Sections which required the vote of the members, we needed to update the Constitution in respect of those parts that the Chairman is able to change on his own authority. This was left to me and the two big changes are to Section 6 (Discipline) and to Section 8 (Money). It must be remembered that the Constitution is a legal document which has to be got right. Which is why, after 18 years, the changes made have been so wide ranging. The previous Constitution in respect of Section 6 with its dictatorial provisions was, we had found, unenforceable in law and therefore worse than useless. It needed a total overhaul and I worked very hard on this with a view to getting a balance between having firm and enforceable sanctions where needed against the demands of fairness.

Major revisions

So it is that the new Section 6 sets out a graduated discipline response with provision for written confirmation of offenses, appeals and tribunal procedures. Summary expulsion is out although it is still possible to summarily suspend a membership along with all rights and privileges in particularly alarming cases prior to a tribunal to decide the issue. The new Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act, concerned with funding had a lot to do with shaping Section 8, which needed radical change. And it is worth mentioning that this is the main reason why publication of the Constitution has been delayed for so long - because this legislation didn't receive Royal Assent until November. Allowing a few changes still to be made by the members, the party now has the Constitution it deserves; one that is fit for the twenty-first century.

All sorts of people support the BNP!

The false media image of the modern patriot marching around in old-fashioned uniforms is a distorted picture that cannot survive among people who have had the chance to meet BNP activists and to read the popular Voice of Freedom newspaper.

The myth that a gap exists between the BNP and the British people is crushed when, for example, BNP activists pop along to the local British Legion, buy BL ties and sell poppies for them for a couple of hours. We can then join in the wreath-laying ceremony and because the event is non-political the authorities will get all the hatred and contempt they deserve for "tampering with memorial cards" if they try to conceal our involvement, as one old soldier reported was done after last November's service in Darlington. Another example is when you take your dog along to leaflet drops. As long as it doesn't look like a rabid killer, most people like a dog. It's a topic of conversation, especially useful if you can get to chat to a member of the local Neighbour Watch Scheme. Nine times out of ten they agree with our anti-crime leaflets and find that they do not have to bother reporting our activity to the police. One chap in my home town recently offered BNP members a pot of tea as a 'thank you' for the hard work being done. When a bit of character is added to events such as the Save our Pound march in Trafalgar Square when I sported a Santa Claus suit and carried a beautiful St. George Cross flag, it makes the BNP very approachable. On that event we managed to get our message across to thousands of decent British people, ranging from doctors to window cleaners, farmers to housewives, as visits to our website later confirmed.

Battle for Britain

This stunt turned out to be an even bigger morale booster to members when the Democracy Movement Christmas card was sent out to thousands of homes with a photo of our Santa on the front! This country needs our help, and most people appreciate our help. There's nothing to be shy about; we're standing up for Britain! So get involved in the action. Get involved in the British National Party.

LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE

The BNP got off to a flying start in 2001 when around 30 top officials attended a leadership conference on the first weekend in January. A whole series of meetings covered all sorts of subjects, ranging from in-depth discussions as to how the party can meet the challenges posed by the new laws on political donations to ways in which to improve the next Red-White-and-Blue festival.

The Advisory Council, Left to Right: Keith Boyall (Party Auditor), Tony Lecomber (Director of Group Development), Chris Green (Director of Administration), Stephen Belshaw (East Midlands, Freedom Books), National Chairman Nick Griffin, John Brayshaw (National Treasurer), Paul Golding (Director of Publicity), Deputy Chairman Scott McLean, Warren Bennett (Chief Steward), Phil Edwards (National Press Officer), Simon Darby (Director of Technology, West Midlands). Absent from photo: Alan Moore (Ulster), Chris Jackson (North West), Bruce Cowd (South West).

regions a chance to make contact and exchange ideas in an informal setting while relaxing after the main business meetings. This was the largest extended leadership conference the BNP has ever held, something that shows how the party is steadily strengthening its organisational base.

On to the future!

As Mr. Griffin told Identity after the weekend, "I've been involved in nationalist politics for 25 years now, and there has never been a time when we've had so many people of such ability and determination working together to push the cause forward. I've no doubt that this is going to bear fruit in the months and years ahead."

Also covered were the continued efforts to improve the party's national administration, future stocking policy for Freedom Books, and ways to improve the attractiveness of our recruitment material.

Politics of the future

The three key players' in the party's administration & finance departments, Chris Green, John Brayshaw and Keith Boyall gave a joint presentation of how their responsibilities are divided up, ensuring both far greater efficiency than before, and also clear financial accountability. The conference was held at the Mid-Wales home of the National Chairman, which meant that, in addition to being completely private, separate meetings, such as of the Advisory Council and the treasury department, were able to be held in rooms adjacent to the main gathering.

In fact, of course, 97% of them think that immigration should be stopped!

ORGANISERS' CONFERENCE

Around 60 key BNP officials from all over the country attended the party's annual start-of-year Organisers' Conference, which was held near Mansfield on 20th January. The highly successful meeting covered a wide range of subjects, ensuring that the party's entire organisation knows what has to be done, and why, in the months ahead.

Director of Group Development Tony Lecomber speaks at the podium

he most important business of the day was a detailed explanation of how the BNP is going to comply with the stringent demands of the new laws on party funding.

The solution

After our plans had been laid out, and various queries were dealt with in a long question-and-answer session, the delegates agreed unanimously that the solution agreed at the Leadership Conference - under which an uncontrollably large number of local unit accounts are replaced with one per region - is the right

one. National Treasurer John Brayshaw and BNP Auditor Keith Boyall followed with a report, including a full annual balance sheet and profit-and-loss account, on national BNP finances over the previous financial year. This was the first time such details have ever been given to BNP officials and marked the fulfilment of one of Mr. Griffin's key leadership election pledges.

The General Election

This was followed by a session led by Director of Group Development Tony Lecomber dealing with our plans for the forthcoming General Election, and for the next round of local elections which, it was agreed, are far more important at this stage in our development. The Party's new constitution was also unveiled and the changes were touched upon also by Tony Lecomber. Also discussed was the possibility of buying a piece of land suitable for future Red-White-and-Blue festivals and other summer events. After some examples of the kind of properties that are available in the £15-£20,000 price range, it was agreed by a large majority of those present that the project is well worth examining further.

Department reports

The meeting was ably chaired by the East Midlands Regional Organiser, Steve Belshaw, and saw reports from the directors of the party's main departments including our National Treasurer John Brayshaw, Director of Group Development Tony Lecomber, Director of Administration Chris Green, Director of Technology Simon Darby and Director of Publicity Paul Golding and our new Deputy Chairman, Scott McLean. The day closed with a short but passionate speech by National Chairman Nick Griffin, in which he explained how some of the desperately sad telephone calls and emails the party receives from the forgotten white victims of the multiracial society act as a spur to everyone who comes across them to work even harder at the task of building the power-winning machine that will bring justice and freedom for the British peoples in their own homeland.

Black Country British National Party back in business!

he Black Country BNP is back in business! With the help of Regional Organiser Simon Darby, new Black Country Organiser John Salvage and his wife Wendy have done an excellent job involving the new inquirers who got in touch as a result of the West Bromwich by-election campaign in which the BNP took 4.5% of the vote. The new local team have also brought in a number of friends and business contacts.

Looking good for the future!

Nearly twenty of those joined party officials at an excellent social evening organised by John and Wendy in Tipton on January 13th. John is a popular and hard-working local businessman, who provided a great deal of help during the West Bromwich West by-election and, with his enthusiasm and drive looks set to become a key BNP organiser in the future.

First meeting soon

A formal inaugural meeting is to be held soon, and work will begin shortly on using the 'inside' information that is now reaching the party locally from Sandwell council employees who have reached the end of their tether as a result of the anti-white policies they are made to enforce every working day. The BNP will be contesting seats in the next council elections, in order to give local people a real alternative to 'Asian Labour'.

We wish John and Wendy all the best in their new role!

New husband and wife Black Country team, John and Wendy Salvage

NEW LAW ON PARTY FUNDING THINGS YOU MUST KNOW!

You may have seen the press reports about the European Union plans to give huge sums of taxpayers' money to pro-EU political parties. There is also a less well-publicised aspect to the Eurocrats' scheme to turn their empire into a "dissident-free zone" - a drive to make it much harder for political parties to raise money from ordinary people. In Britain, this takes the form of the Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act, which takes effect next month.

This makes it illegal for any party to accept anonymous donations of more than £200, or to accept a donation of more than £200 from anyone who is not on the electoral register in the UK. Any 'unacceptable' gifts will have to be returned to the donors if we can identify them, or handed over to the Government if we can't!

All in hand

We have already submitted to the Electoral Commission our organisational schedule under which we will be able to meet the legal requirements for recording and reporting all such donations. All local bank accounts will have to go, and all finance coordinated on a regional basis. Group, branch and regional officials will all be provided with all the information and, where necessary, training and advice, so there is nothing to worry about here.

To our advantage

We will not only overcome the challenges this Blairite/EU meddling poses, we will turn it into an advantage by making our organisation more efficient. What ordinary members do, however, need to take on board is that, from now on, we are unable to accept anonymous donations of more than £200, and that before accepting donations of more than £200 even from donors known to us we will have to have confirmation that they are on the electoral register. Even worse, is the fact that we will only be able to receive funds left to us in a will, if that person had been on a UK electoral register during the five years before their death!

Attacks on our freedom!

Someone might have worked and paid taxes in this country all his or her life, fought for this country and raised a family here, but if that person wasn't registered to vote then any money they leave the party in their will would be taken by Blair & Co! So if you are one of the people who have remembered the British National Party in their will, please make sure you are also on the electoral register. Just call your Town Hall and ask to speak to the Returning Officer if you are in any doubt. You should also contact us to inform us of your bequest and provide details of your executors. And if by chance you have been thinking of making a will or of changing it to leave something to help the BNP, then you can make your own protest against this latest New Labour/EU attack on our traditional freedoms by leaving a big enough sum to make a real difference - and making sure you're on the electoral register so that it goes to the BNP and not Gordon Brown!. If you need advice from a sympathetic solicitor, please call us on 0700 900 2671 and we'll put you in touch.

LAUNCH OF "BUILDING BLOCKS" FUND!

While the Labour and Tory parties are bankrolled by multi-million donations from big businessmen buying influence and knighthoods, the British National Party has only one source of funds - the ordinary, decent men and women who are its members and supporters.

Income from membership subscriptions and sales of literature brings in enough to pay the party's basic running costs, but additional funds are necessary to pay for serious organisational advances. So we've identified a number of organisational improvements we need to make over the next six months. Some are quite minor in themselves, others are just the start of much bigger projects, but all are important when it comes to giving the BNP firm foundations for future growth.

Foundations

None of them alone is going to cost a really big sum of money, but to get all these foundation stones in place is going to cost £14,000. This is why we've launched the Building Blocks Fund, and it's why we're asking every single British National Party member and supporter to help us reach the £14,000 target as quickly as possible. Your donation can either be just to the Building Blocks Fund in general, or you can indicate what particular initiative you want to support - we will, as far as possible, take notice of what our supporters think are the most important building blocks to put in place.

The targets

Targets: 1) Training and equipping regional treasurers £1,000; 2) Top quality anti-virus software for 12 key computers £500; 3) Internet radio station £3,000; 4) Design and preparation of new leaflet range £500; 5) Revamp and upgrade of key BNP circles and recruitment material £2,000; 6) Training canvassing teams £1,000; 7) Further improvements to display backdrops for major meetings £500; 8) Tapes and related materials for personal recruitment experiment £1,000; 9) White Victims' Support Group £500; 10) Design and production of activists' and organisers' support packs £2,000; 11) Production of Manifesto £2000.

TAM LIN: A TALE OF CAPTURE BY THE INHABITANTS OF THE OTHERWORLD

Hard for us to imagine today as we go about our business in a largely urban setting, surrounded by concrete and glass but a strong belief by our ancestors in another World, or Fairie World was commonplace even until relatively recently.

An image of the Celtic maiden featured in the legend

It was first the introduction of Christianity 1500 years ago that weakened our ancestral ideas but it took a combination of the spread of formal education and the Industrial Revolution to lead to an almost total neglect of our islands' ancient beliefs.

A European story

Tam Lin is a story usually but not always set in the Borderlands of Scotland. There are variations on a theme from Wales, Ireland and continental Europe. It tells of a young maiden, in the classic (modern) version of the tale by Robert Burns, she is called Janet, elsewhere Margaret or Jenny, who dares to ride across the lonely moors of Carterhaugh (even today the A68 which crosses the moor of that name can be a lonely road, woe betide any driver who gets stuck here, over 20 miles from the nearest town and petrol station) to prove that she will return a maiden again and not be violated by the mythical Tam Lin who takes any female for his own pleasure. She rides to Carterhaugh and finds Tam Lin asleep, teases his presence and returns a heroine, but she then increases the stakes and takes a moneyed bet with her uncle to prove she can do the same again. This time Tam Lin is awake and she leaves only after she carries Tam Lin's child in her womb!

Captive

She returns to her family who grieve for her future but Janet accepts her fate and returns to Caterhaugh where Tam Lin tells her that he is a captive of the Fairie Queen and on the night of Hallowe-en if Janet loves him and values what she carries in her womb she must hold on to him regardless of what will happen to him. On that fateful evening, the horde of the Underworld rises and rides through the mist on their black horses. During this ride to Hell, Janet bravely seizes hold of her lover riding a milk-white steed and, despite his shape-changing into a lizard, snake, bear and a lion he eventually changes into a handsome man. He is then released from the spell cast upon him by the Fairie Queen. Janet and Tam Lin then raise a healthy child.

Knowledge of who we are and where we came from

So what is a fairie story doing in a political journal? The BNP is dedicated to the preservation of our People and Race. Politics is a means to achieve that end. But without knowledge of who we are and where we came from, a consideration of our future is meaningless. Myths and legends tell us about the way our ancestors saw their own worlds, particularly before the advent of Christianity. They may have lacked the gadgets and infrastructure that we take for granted today but they had the wisdom to recognise the importance to their crops and livelihoods of the changing of the seasons and to observe the natural process of procreation, gestation and childbirth. Tam Lin is a story about inherent good and evil. The Fairie Queen is a remnant of a darker force before the coming of Christianity, she represents the darker side of our human nature, and she may represent winter. Janet represents the virgin who is prepared to sacrifice her standing in the world to raise her child and win her lover from arduous circumstances. She represents Spring and devoted Motherhood, the very essence of the future of our folk.

BOOK REVIEW

By Jofin Armstrong

"Revolution From The Middle" by Sam Francis

Sam Francis, the author of this series of essays is a nationally syndicated correspondent who does not fail to speak his mind about the consequences of supporting a government bureaucracy which insists on proving that black is white, and that recorded history is something to be ashamed of rather than rejoicing in. I think that this pocket size volume is a valuable addition to every nationalists bookshelf.

Of use to British readers

The book obviously is aimed at the American market but there is much to recommend it to British readers - here too we have middle and working class families who pay taxes and deplore what the liberal elites are doing in their name.

Striking fear into the hearts of liberals

Francis is excellent in showing how nationalists and populists like David Duke and Pat Buchanan terrify the liberal elites because of their direct appeal to ordinary white Americans, and the fact that they speak to their constituency without trying to be all things to all men like so many of our own spin doctor led darlings.

Revolution from the Middle is available from Freedom books at £6.50. Write to PO Box 20, Mansfield, NG19 6HP.

● New Black Country organiser John Salvage gives...

A WAKE UP CALL TO OUR PEOPLE!

If you think your life is far too comfortable, and far too peaceful to bother with mundane things such as worrying about crime or Britain's future, then think again, my fellow Brits. Under the gaze of Dudley Castle, and the even older, ancient Priory, we've just had another piece of proof of the treacherous, and government aided, cover up of our peoples' "annihilation in waiting."

white woman was verbally and physically attacked by a black racist on a bus, who told her that "things are going to change soon in this country," before calling her a 'racist'. She promptly reported the kicks and the abuse to the police, but they refused to take it seriously. It took many phone calls, and in the end, she went to the police station to complain in person.

Anti-white racism

While she was there, another black man came in and started ranting and raving at the WPC, who was then called a 'fat white bitch'. The woman who was attacked on the bus asked the WPC if she was going to do anything about it, and was told she would lose her job if she did so! Anti-white racial attacks are on the increase, with 6,600 reported last year alone. You will not hear this in the media though, as Tony Blair's Champaign Communist inspired dictatorship has told all the well known organisations including the BBC, not to class black crime as 'black crime', but crime.

Destroying our identity

At the same time, the multi-racists are destroying our cultural identity as well. Again, let me give you a local example: Councillor Uppal of Smethwick has complained that 'ethnic minorities' are not included in Smethwick's new documentary film about its heritage.

The time is now!

The fact that Smethwick has a history of a thousand years, and that non-whites have only been there 45 or so years is apparently 'racist exclusion'! In truth, if anyone is being 'excluded', it's us! Our children are to be taught 'Asian dialects', as are staff at the West Bromwich Building Society. The ancient area of Balsall Heath near Birmingham is now Apna Town ('Our Town' in Urdu). All our traditions are being watered down or destroyed.

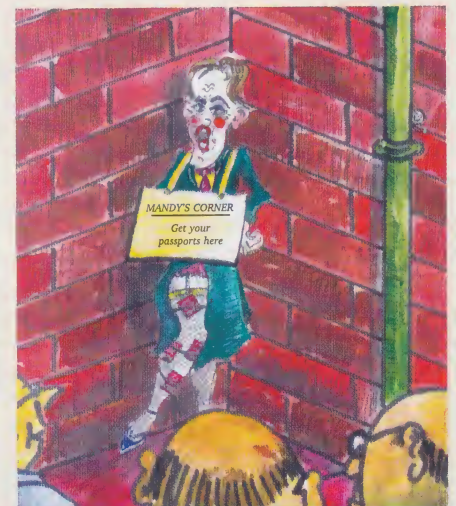

Play your part!

If you think you can hide your head under your pillow and hope things will be OK in the end, then what about these simple ideas - as the EU expands into the cheap labour east, huge numbers will come here under EC rules for work. What will you do for a job? Where will you go?

As Jack Straw lets in more and more 'asylum seekers' - including hijackers - to live here at our expense, how much more tax can you pay? If we keep accepting non whites into the UK, what will become of your children's children? If we ignore our manufacturing base and heritage, what we will become is labourers, low paid and with no unity, second class citizens and outcasts in our own land. Can you, will you, allow this to happen? I hope not!

Peter Mandelson just about sums up "New Labour" - degenerate, anti-British and corrupt!

■ Sir: Your readers will be interested to learn of some very strange goings on within the UK Independence Party. Here in Harrogate they recently held two 'UKIP' meetings in different hotels on the same night! When we heard about this, we produced a short letter about the BNP, asking UKIP supporters how their supposedly patriotic party could ignore the question of immigration, and pointing out that the BNP is a far more logical, principled alternative to the Establishment than their own organisation. No one seemed to know what this latest UKIP split is all about, but our letters were read with great interest! I attended the Organisers' Conference in Mansfield and was impressed by the quality of the speakers and the contributions from the floor. The party is clearly on the move. In this area we have a 100 per cent membership renewal rate, and we aim to double our membership this year.

■ Sir: The new full colour Identity is just stunning! It's a shame that a combination of leftist intimidation and PC censorship by the people in charge of the big newsagents chains mean that it can't go on the newsstands, because it's easily good enough to hold its own against the most professional mainstream magazines in the land. The BNP should be proud to have such a top quality publication as its flagship, and I am sure that it will prove very useful in recruiting new members and building the party in the future.
